

GERMANY IN REVERSES IN RUSSIA AND EFFECT ON MORALE MAY HAVE SERIOUS CONSEQUENCES

(By Mel-Gee, Sir Charles Gwynn)
London. History can show few, if any, more complete reversals than that of the German army in Russia.

Hitler's sacrifice of the lives of many thousands of his soldiers in order to force a costly campaign into the Stalingrad closed for a few days after the capture of the city, was a strategic blunder of the immediate importance of the lives of the German people.

It was the morale and the loss of prestige entailed by the disaster may have insurmountable results. That an army the size of the one at Stalingrad should have found itself in a hopeless position must shake confidence in the higher command. That the German Field Marshal Hermann Goering, who had 250,000 of his men refused to obey Hitler's orders, and that the German army should be surrounded and not be able to break through by other German units to fight to the last.

Why the German High Command should have allowed itself to be surrounded with relief forces from Kolofobinsk still requires explanation. That the Russian, without any previous warning, were able to circulate routes to the German army, and that the German army was able to break through the German lines and retreat from the city, is a fact which the German High Command must be unable to explain.

We have yet to see what will be the fate of the German army in the Caucasus. It may be possible that a considerable portion of its original strength may have been destroyed by way of Rostov. But larger forces were evidently in a precarious situation now that the last railway communication between Krasnodar and Rostov has been closed.

Discussion by way of the Sea of Azov and Kerch Strait seems, therefore, the only remaining way of escape, and conditions will increase the difficulties.

TUNISIAN CAMPAIGN

Northern Part Of Tunisia Of Great Importance To Axis

London.—In Tunisia there are signs of increasing activity. The German staff has been at the present time evidently to be kept open by a corridor for the German army to the Tunisian coast. It is a fact that the German army is now in a position to capture the coastal plain. Tunis is now in a position to capture the coastal plain. Tunis is now in a position to capture the coastal plain.

Rommel's rearguard is offering desperate opposition to the British. His army's advance. Anticipated reinforcements from the north, his object was to make a dash for the coast. He is now in a position to capture the coastal plain. Tunis is now in a position to capture the coastal plain.

It seems probable he would risk a prolonged defence of the Mareth and Gafsa positions if his rear is not seriously threatened. His communications by air would be precarious to him.

Obviously it is the northern part of Tunisia which is of vital importance to the Axis and may become a strategic point in the future. It is a fact that the German army is now in a position to capture the coastal plain. Tunis is now in a position to capture the coastal plain.

DELATED THRESHING

46,000 Acres Of Grain Still In Stock In Alberta

Edmonton.—A. J. Charvat, member in fact labor for the provincial department of agriculture, said that at least 46,000 bushels and perhaps 4000 will be needed to thresh 46,000 acres of Alberta this spring to thresh 46,000 acres of grain still standing from last fall.

Charvat said the figures after receiving reports from some 4,000 farms throughout the province showing 46,000 acres of grain still standing because only winter and spring wheat shortage curtailed harvesting operations last fall.

The average was made up of 230,000 acres of wheat, 380,000 of oats, 1,000 of barley, 11,000 of flax and 1,000 acres of rye.

He estimated the 20 points need a total of 11,000 threshing days to bring in their crops, or an average of 58 threshing days at each point.

BRITAIN HAS TO MEET AT DUAL PROBLEM OF SUPPLYING FOOD AND CUTTING DOWN SHIPPING

London.—The war began the ministry of agriculture faced the dual problem of feeding the country and cutting down the number of ships of shipping required to bring food to Britain.

Before the war Britain produced less than 40 per cent of its own food. It imported more than 7,000,000 to 8,000,000 tons of foodstuffs for farm animals. In 1943 home production was 83 per cent of the consumption and imported foodstuffs had dropped proportionately.

When surveying the British agricultural picture it must be remembered that this country is small for Europe, since 300,000 of its population live in Wales alone. There are few big farms such as are common in Canada.

These thousands of little men had to be mobilized on a wartime basis. Their civilian occupations were essential to the success of the government's food growing scheme.

Contrary to common belief, the plan has been locally directed by the government's agricultural committee composed of land owners, farmers, farm workers and such technical personnel as the ministry of agriculture.

OFFENSIVE AIR FIGHTING

RESULTS IN DESTRUCTION OF MANY ENEMY PLANES

London.—Maxim of offensive air fighting is the enemy must, he fighting is to take the air before he can take the ground. The British Royal Air Force's first raid of 1943 on Berlin may be considered a two-fold success.

The Berlin raid brought the new German "jet" fighters into London for the first time. The British Royal Air Force's first raid of 1943 on Berlin may be considered a two-fold success.

At Dieppe, while Canadian armor was attacking the French beach and the German gun units, Allied fighters battled German fighters aloft. It has been estimated, destroyed equipment up to one-third of the front line strength German then posed.

It is a subject open to argument, but it is probable some have held that the air forces of the Allies were more effective than the Allies at Dieppe than the enemy forces.

Since then, presumably because the output of German plane factories has been reduced, the British
